THE HOME PAPER

SAY!

(By CHARLES J. ARNOLD)

A lot of those who graduate from DePauw today with the belief that they have the world right in the palm of their hand, will learn, through experience, that compared with the size of the palm of their hand the world is large.

Boy, howdy!! That class reunion I was telling you about was a hum-dinger. The only trouble I experienced was that a tent to hold the meeting in was entirely too "low necked" for the weather.

You ask me what my school class was. You really want to know? I'll tell you if I really must. My class, it was—Oh! Oh!!

Perhaps I'd better not be frank. Maybe I'd best go slow. For if I'd tell, perhaps you'd think That I am old—Oh! Oh!!

And so I think I'll change my mind. I really think I ought. And then, perhaps you'll figure out That I'm a "naughty, naught."

Although Greencastle people are pretty staid, conservative sort of folks, I know of an event scheduled to occur next week that is apt to get a lot of them "up in the air."

Greencastle's new airport is being prepared for the big Air Tour reception a week from tomorrow. Folks will be mighty proud when they see the new field and realize that Greencastle is keeping up its good record by leading in the procession of municipal progress.

How about a circus, this summer? A summer without a circus is like a ham sandwich without mustard—sorta flat.

If persverance wins, Art Hamrick who has been a candidate for Secretary of State on the Democratic ticket, three or four times, and is a candidate for nomination again, this year, certainly out to go things and do places, or what have you?

Greencastle is well supplied with "tentative" candidates for state office. A "tentative" candidate is not one who lives in a tent, but rather one who lives in a tall house fully equipped with lightning rods.

We certainly had an early fall.

The Weather—The rain was all right but why the winter?

DEMOCRATS TO INDIANAPOLIS TO ATTEND THE CONVENTION

Many Putnam county Democrats are in Indianapolis this afternoon to attend the preliminary meetings in connection with the State Convention to be tomorrow.

The delegates from this county who will attend the convention are: Fred Boatman, Bainbridge; Chester Ruark, Fillmore; Nathan Call, Rosedale; Sanford Romine, Morton; Ivan Ruark, Greencastle; John White, Reelsville; Ed Lynch, Cloverdale; Frank Heath, Cloverdale; Roscoe Scott, Greencastle; J. L. Hamilton, Greencastle; C. A. Kelley, Greencastle; Jess Young, Greencastle.

Arthur Hamrick, former Greencastle resident, is a candidate for the nomination for secretary of state; Dr. T. A. Sigler of this city, may also get into the race for the same nomination and Fred V. Thomas, of this city, has announced his intentions of being a candidate for reporter of the supreme court.

PURDUE MAN VISITS PUTNAM COUNTY FARMS

J. Carroll Bottom of the Farm Management division of Purdue university is in Putnam county, and accompanied by County Agent Floyd Miller is visiting farms in Putnam county, where farm record books are being kept. About sixty Putnam county farmers are keeping records of their farm expenditures and profits. Mr. Bottom expects to be here several days.

TWO ARE VICTIMS OF GANG WARFARE

BISHOP HUGHES GIVES CHARGE TO D.P.U. GRADUATES

CLASS OF 304 SENIORS ARE GRADUATED IN COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES HELD THIS MORNING IN BOWMAN GYMNASIUM—DEGREES ARE CONFERRING

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Bishop of the Chicago area, Methodist Episcopal church, made the commencement address here this morning for 304 seniors receiving degrees from DePauw university. Bishop Hughes, himself a former president of the University, commanded a great audience. Bowman gymnasium was packed to hear him.

The speaker used as his topic "I and We." His message was based upon a recent biography of the Adams family whose members have held positions of distinction from colonial times until now. Bishop Hughes attempted to show by the negative side of this great family, the need for the graduate to be able to merge his individualistic "I" into the co-operative "We" in this modern and complex world.

Bishop Hughes carried his illustrations into five fields of human experience. His first was marriage, showing that family life must fail if it is based upon a masculine or feminine "I" instead of a harmonious "we."

His second point was made in the field of education, with pertinent illustrations both from his own experience and from the biography in question, he indicated the need of a great co-operation between teacher and student, between teach and teacher, and the failure that can result from a dominating "I."

The third field touched upon was that of friendship. The strong personalities in the Adams family usually died unwept and unmourned by a true friend due to a domineering "I" that could not meet another on a common ground as "we."

The fourth field dealt with everyday life, with business, with contacts that are made in seeking a livelihood. Here co-operation means everything and where a strong individualistic person can do good in a crisis, the common experience is that a co-operative "we" is more to be desired.

The last point the speaker made was in the field of religion where even Christ said "If a man love Me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love me and WE will come unto him and make our abode with him." This merger went even farther the speaker said and Christ, after identifying himself with every man, the individual needs not only a "we" fellowship with God but also a feeling of companionship with men and women.

Bishop Hughes closed his address with this paragraph:

"So, dear young friends, on your graduation day, we summon you to pass up into all good and holy consideration—whether of home, or of school, or of friendship, or of government, or of religion, even into the companionship with God who makes possible all their glories—so that the passing 'I' may become an everlasting 'We.'"

Degrees were conferred by Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, president of DePauw university. This year five distinguished persons received the degree of Doctor of Laws and four received the degree of Doctor of Divinity. The LL.D.'s were Judge James H. Wilkerson, Chicago; Judge Halsted L. Ritter, Miami, Fla.; Judge Will M. Sparks, Chicago; Hon. Salmon O. Levinson, Chicago, and Louis B. Hopkins, judges and graduates of DePauw.

The Doctor of Divinity degrees were conferred upon the Rev. W. D. Fairchild, Chicago; the Rev. Hanford C. Wright, Kendallville; the Rev. Guy O. Carpenter, Crawfordsville, and the Rev. Charles W. Whitman, Vincennes. All are graduates or former students at DePauw and with the exception of the Rev. Mr. Fairchild who is area secretary, are past (Please Turn to Page 2)

BALLOONS TO BE RELEASED ON WEDNESDAY

SEVEN HUNDRED TOY BALLOONS ADVERTISING THE ALL-INDIANA AIR TOUR TO BE RELEASED WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock the first ascension of toy balloons advertising the All-Indiana Air Tour which will be here on June 17, will take place. Seven hundred balloons will be released from a tent erected on the court house lawn at 4 o'clock. It is expected that many people will be downtown to see the balloons turned loose. The same number will be released on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Monday.

Each balloon will be tagged with a card bearing the date of the tour. Some of the cards will be marked redeemable by merchants and when presented will entitle the holder to a gift. Some merchants will redeem as many as fifteen tickets. Some of the tickets will entitle the holder to a ride in the Tri-motored plane which will be here all day on Tuesday.

The name of Dobbs Tire & Battery Company was omitted from the list of names of merchants sponsoring the balloons published last Friday.

SHELBYVILLE FIRM BUYS PUTNAM COUNTY WOOL

The Putnam County Wool Growers association received bids in the county agent's office in the county court house Saturday afternoon. The bids were for the wool to be sold this year by the Putnam County Wool Pool. Levinstein Brothers of Shelbyville were the successful bidders.

Levinstein Brothers bid 26 1/4c for merchantable wool and 21c for second grade wool. Their bid was one cent above that of the second highest bid. There were five bids submitted.

The company will receive the wool here in Greencastle Wednesday, June 18. Any wool grower of Putnam county may sell with the wool pool.

OXNAM DELIVERS BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS SUNDAY

DEPAUW PRESIDENT SPEAKS BEFORE A PACKED AUDITORIUM IN METHODIST CHURCH SUNDAY MORNING

"VANISHING VISIONS" TOPIC

leaves immediately for Lafayette to deliver the Baccalaureate Address to Purdue University Seniors

Before a packed auditorium in new Methodist Episcopal church Sunday morning, Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, president of DePauw university, delivered the baccalaureate sermon for 304 seniors who will receive degrees in commencement exercises today.

An entire section of the auditorium was reserved for fathers and mothers of the seniors. Hundreds of alumni who had returned for Alumni Day, Saturday, stayed over for the baccalaureate and commencement addresses. Dr. Oxnam left immediately after the address Sunday for Lafayette where he was scheduled to deliver the baccalaureate address there for the graduating class of Purdue University.

Here, President Oxnam used as his topic "Vanishing Visions." He said: "I doubt not that every man and woman before me has some cherished dream, some compelling ideal, some splendid aspiration. Perhaps no one here knows of your dreams, your ideal, your aspiration, save yourself. The question I desire to ask is a troublesome one. Are ideals of an evanescent nature? Do our splendid visions vanish?"

It may be that there has come to you the desire to achieve true scholarship and yourself become a sincere scholar. Such an ideal may have come from association with the splendid scholars of the University who have revealed a passion for painstaking accuracy. Men who have observed intensely, carefully controlled their experiments, learned how to interpret the facts they have faced, and, after slow research, have laid hold upon fundamental principles which, in turn, have become tools for further research. These men have incarnated the quality of teachable humility. In addition, they have possessed the ability to relate the particular to the general, to understand the significance of that analyzed in the light of the whole. They have been masters of narrow fields of learning, but trained broadly enough to know the relationship of their special field of learning to all other fields. That may be your ideal. But there is ever the danger of the vision splendor vanishing. When the routine of daily activity begins and the task of bread-winning is upon your shoulders, the hours for study seem to be limited, research is postponed and slowly the vision of the scholar is lost. But he who recognizes the danger may prepare himself to face it and become victor over the tendency to lose the ideal and remain a scholar in fact.

Others perhaps have cherished the desire to become a constructive citizen. This is a worthy ideal. In the work in history an understanding of the contributions of the forefathers has been required, relationships with men who have traveled and have been able to reveal to us America the beautiful, appreciation of the great servants in the political life of the nation, have quickened within us the desire to render some service to our country of constructive nature. When graduation comes, one enters the so-called struggles for existence. He hears that self-interest is the only sufficient motive to drive men to real achievement. He is told that moral right must bow to economic necessity. As Maschell puts it, he has a tendency to: "Back what is against what's right."

And all the while if it be he follows self interest, if it be he refuses to recognize moral right if it be he backs what's wrong, the vision splendor, the ideal of constructive citizenship, fades.

DePauw will receive the gift of $100,000 from the Rockefeller foundation providing the school raises four times that amount. A plan for the campaign is being arranged by President Francis McConnell, Dr. Salem Town and Mr. Doroughty, president of the board of trustees.

Earl Houck, son of O. N. Houck of Reelsville won the trophy race of Terre Haute. He drove a "Mairion 32."

DePauw beat Wabash in a baseball game of 13 innings 5-4 in Crawfordsville yesterday.

Will Voliva of Indianapolis is here for commencement. He will go to Seattle, Washington, from here, where he has accepted a position.

TWO HELD AS SUSPECTS ARE FREED SUNDAY

TWO VAGRANTS PICKED UP BY OFFICIALS FRIDAY IN CONNECTION WITH PURSE THEFT ARE RELEASED FROM JAIL

Albert Burks, 40, of Michigan and George Thompson, 21, of Houston, Texas were released from the Putnam county jail Sunday by sheriff Edward Eiteljorge, when local authorities failed to connect them with the theft of a purse from Mrs. Mort Dill.

The purse was alleged to have been stolen from a bench in the waiting room of the Big Four station about 9:30 o'clock Friday morning a few moments after Mrs. Dill had left a Big Four train. The men who had spent most of the morning near and in the station were arrested by officials on a charge of vagrancy.

Search of the men failed to reveal any money. The pocketbook was said to contain $25 in cash and a $50 check. Mrs. Dill is a resident of New York State and is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Mary Mathias at her home at 625 East Seminary street.

CAR STRIKES WAGON; MAN IS INJURED

CARL SMITH OF NEAR BAINBRIDGE IS PAINFULLY INJURED WHEN WAGON IS HIT BY AUTOMOBILE SUNDAY EVENING

Carl Smith, who resides about three miles west of Bainbridge on State Road 36, was painfully injured Sunday evening about 8 o'clock when a wagon in which he was riding was struck by an automobile driven by C. J. Priest, who lives east of the town of Bainbridge.

The accident occurred just west of Bainbridge. Smith and his son Charles Smith were going East on State Road 36 in their wagon when it was struck in the rear by the automobile driven by Priest. Priest said his lights had gone out, and that he was unable to see the horse drawn vehicle.

The wagon was wrecked and the harness torn from the horses pulling it. The Priest car was also damaged, the damage being confined to the radiator and front fenders. Priest and Charles Smith suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Carl Smith was taken to a Bainbridge physician where his injuries were cared for. They are not of a serious nature. It is understood that Priest has agreed to pay damage to the owners of the wagon.

The Smiths were moving at the time their wagon was struck, and Priest has also agreed to move them according to information.

CHICAGO GANG WARFARE TAKES ANOTHER LIFE

ALLEGED RACKETEER IS FOUND DEAD—SIX BULLETS HAD BEEN FIRED INTO BODY AT CLOSE RANGE

THOMPSON IS WOUNDED

Frank Thompson Alleged To Have Sold the Machine Guns Used in the St. Valentine's Day Massacre Refuses to Talk After Being Shot Near Heart

CHICAGO, June 9.—(INS)—The warfare that has wracked Chicago's gangs for the past week flared out anew today with the slaying of one racketeer and the mysterious shooting of Frank Thompson, once accused as the distributor of the machine guns used in the St. Valentine's Day massacre of seven Moran gangsters.

Aloysius Kearney, reputed racketeer, organization slinger and collector for a new alleged racket, was shot and killed today. Six bullets were fired into his body from close range and he slumped to the sidewalk and died.

Thompson, who was questioned following the St. Valentine's massacre, and admitted selling several machine guns to gangsters, was new death at a Rockford, Ill., hospital to day where he was taken after he slumped over the steering wheel of his automobile with a bullet near his heart.

Despite the pleadings of police Thompson refused to utter a word regarding the shooting.

Police linked the slaying of Kearney with the death of Eugene "Red" McLaughlin, gangster whose trussed and weighted body was taken from the drainage canal Saturday where it had been huffed after he was slain. Kearney and McLaughlin had been close friends, it was learned.

Rector Alumni Honored At Luncheon Sunday

About seventy Rector scholar alumni, their wives and friends were entertained at a luncheon in Longden Hall Sunday noon by the Edward Rector Scholarship Foundation. Mrs. Edward Rector, widow of the DePauw benefactor, was present as honoree, as was Roy O. West of Chicago, president of the board of trustees.

Robert Stewart of Brazil, president of the Rector Alumni Association presided at an informal program. Mr. West was the first speaker followed by Dr. Longden and Dr. John Cady. The latter is a former president of the Rector Alumni and a member of the class of 1922.

Dewey Sanders, the first student ever to receive a Rector Scholarship was present. Following a short talk by Harold E. Robbins, permanent secretary of the association, each returning alumni Rector Scholar was called upon to give his name, class and a short account of his activities since graduation. Representatives were present from the classes of 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1929. The classes of 1923 and 1929 tied for honors with eight representatives each.

Dr. Longden in his short talk stated that this year the foundation passed the 1,900 mark for scholarships awarded. There are approximately 100 Rector scholars in the senior class this year costing the foundation some $120,000 each year to graduate. Over 150 new scholarships have been awarded already this year and the total will reach 250 by September, he predicted.

In a short business session following the luncheon, officers for the coming year were elected. Robert Stewart was re-elected president of the association, Russell Alexander of Greencastle was chosen vice-president, and Harold Robbins of Greencastle was continued as permanent secretary and treasurer. Mr. Stewart is city attorney of Brazil and a member of the class of 1923.

'ISLE OF ESCAPE'

Copyright 1930, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

Based on the Warner Bros. motion picture and the novel by Jack
McLaren of the same title.

SYNOPSIS

On the South Sea island whither they have fled to escape her brutal husband in name only, Stella Black-ney and David Wade are happy until Moira, a half-caste girl they befriend, falls in love with David. They quarrel and Stella is carried out to sea in an earless boat. David learns that he loves Stella more than anything else and sets out in a cutter to find her. He encounters her husband, O'Shane, come to reclaim her and for vengeance. When O'Shane learns that the deserted canoe he had passed had carried Stella away, and they realize she has been captured by head-hunters from a nearby island, the men for-geat their quarrel and set out in search of her.

At mid-afternoon they were under the lee of the mountains and sailing along them.

For an hour they sailed that deep-shored coast, winding through and between reefs and sandbanks, and other shallows; then—almost abreast of O'Shane's vessel, for the wind had strengthened—they came to a long, high headland which jutted abruptly seaward, and round- ing it, entered a deep, wide bay.

CHAPTER XVI

Wade's and O'Shane's small boats reached the shore together. With O'Shane were a number of his crew, fuzzy-headed New Guinea men, each with a rifle, and some with re- volvers beside; but Wade had with him only Dolobe, for to have ac- companied him would have meant at best an acquiescence sulky and fearful.

"Come on, produce her!"

and therefore entirely useless; in- deed, men in the condition of mind that was theirs would have been a definite hindrance.

"Cunning devils!" commented O'Shane as they went up the beach.

The most outstanding feature was the behaviour of the villagers. It was a most peculiar behaviour in the circumstances. From the mo- ment of landing, and before it, the two white men and their natives had been expectant of attack, of some display of resistance in keep- ing with the character and savage reputation of these people. They kept their rifles "at the ready," and their manner of going up through the palms was the manner of a scouting party making a cautious approach. But no attack came.

"Not a bit afraid of us, are y', y' devils! We'll see all about that!" O'Shane strode up to one of the vil- lagers and grasped him by the shoulder. "Where's the chief of yours? Kapa?"

The villager indicated with his hand a man who had come out on to the platform before the door of the Sacred House.

"Kapa," muttered the villager. Kapa was young, powerful of build, dead black of skin, and naked save for a loin cloth of printed cal- ico.

At the approach of the white men Kapa took from behind his ear a cigarette made from crude tobacco rolled in a strip of rolled banana leaf; and put it in his mouth.

"You want something?" he asked easily, and the accent of his English was as good as his phrasing.

"Got a match?" To Wade he was a remarkable phenomenon. He was a kind of white-black-man, or a kind of black-white-man, a mixture of the unmis- takeable, a paradox. But Wade didn't dwell on this. With revolver raised and aimed, he stepped to the foot of the platform.

"Where is she?" he said evenly. "The white woman y' kidnapped! My wife!" shouted O'Shane. "Out with her, or something's goin' to happen dead sudden!"

A flicker showed in Kapa's eyes; curiously sophisticated eyes they were, out of character with the rest of his face.

"You have come very quick," he said. "You must have hurried." O'Shane raised his rifle.

"Come on! Produce her!" he roared; and all the threat that was the note of his being was in his tone.

Kapa showed no concern what- ever. Just as the villagers about the houses were nonchalant, so was he nonchalant.

"And if I don't?" he asked. Then he smiled. "I don't reckon you'll shoot," he added.

"And why not?" from Wade. Kapa lit his cigarette from a lighted stick brought him by one of his men. The man walked re- spectfully backwards from his pres- ence.

"Because," said Kapa slowly, "it will be the end of the white woman. That's something you want to get well fixed in your minds."

"It's this way," he went on. "When I saw your boats comin' I guessed what you were after. It wasn't hard to guess—though I must say you've been damn quick. So, I fixed things. I ain't takin' chances. I fixed things. I'm the boss of this village, and of my other village up there in the moun- tains. The real, king-pin boss. What I say goes, and goes quick."

He took a deep puff at the cigar- ette, and blew out the smoke as though in expression of a most profound satisfaction.

"I've fixed it that if you don't drop that pistol right now the woman dies. Try anything on me, and it's the end of her. She don't mean anything much to me—as a woman. I'm only keeping her be- cause she's white."

There was no mistaking that he meant it.

"You swine!" O'Shane breathed. And at the word Kapa threw away his cigarette. A sudden far- ing came into his eyes.

"Swine!" he repeated. "That's what they called me in the sugar- fields of Queensland. I was a swine—that's all in me is the blood of great men! In me—Kapa!" He stepped forward a little, with his head thrust forward and his hands clenched as though to strike.

"I, Kapa, was taken to work on the sugar-fields. Stolen! Kid- napped! Blackbirding, they called it. I was only a boy. Ten years old. That's all. They came in a schooner, those blackbirders, an- chored where your boats are an- chored now, and asked the people to go off and receive presents from the store-chest. The people were simple. They knew nothing of white men, and white men's ways. They were—what is the word?—trusting. Yes, trusting. Forty of us went on board. The white men took us down into the hold and showed us the store-chest. There were all kinds of things—rolls of cloth, beads, hand-mirrors—and they told us to choose what we would like. They said they wanted to show us how much they liked us. They said they were our great friends. The lying devils! While we were down there choosing they ran the hatches on and put to sea . . . It was the last I was to see of my home for eighteen years . . ."

"Eighteen years of slaving for white men!" Kapa continued. "Eighteen years of being a work- beast! Back there I was a bit of dirt!" He waved a hand in the direction of Queensland. Queens- land was a thousand miles away, but the manner of his waving seemed to bring it within sight.

"I, Kapa, chief and son of chiefs! A bit of dirt! They sent me to school. They pitied me for being a poor, miserable black! The Mis- sions, that is. The others only got all the work out of me they could. I was a thing to be pitied. I was a thing to be worked, like a horse. It was always one of those two things, and often both. I, Kapa! Oh, I tell you I got it in for whites . . . A year ago the chance came to come back home and I came. I found my father was dead, and I was the chief."

"The chief!" He laughed wildly. "Instead of pity, I had respect and fear. A thousand men to do what I told them. If I told one of those men there to kill himself, he would do it. 'I'll show you, if you don't believe me. That's a bit different to what I've had for eighteen dam' years."

"And now I've got a white woman!" Kapa continued. "A great bit of luck! My chance to even things up a bit with the whites! A white woman . . . No, it's no use threatening me with that pistol, mister, or you, either, with the rifle. She dies the moment you try anything. I've ordered it, and that's enough. She's here in the Sacred House, with armed men all about her. One crack with a club—savvy? You might shoot me, mis- ter; but you can be damn' well cer- tain you won't get the woman. I've fixed that."

Wade's blood ran suddenly hot. Stella was there in the Sacred House, only a few yards away! Despite Kapa's threat, an emo- tional impulse urged him to rush up that crazy ladder on to the plat- form and force his way inside the house. His muscles tensed them- selves for the effort. He took a half-step forward. There was a cry of warning from O'Shane. Wade stopped.

STATE OFFICIAL ISSUES RULES GOVERNING FIREWORKS SALE

Alfred Hogston, state fire marshal has issued the following rules for the display, sale and handling of fire- works, effective June 10th, 1930.

1. No fire works shall be put on display before June 20th. The display must be done in such a way that there will be no danger of the goods being exploded by the rays of the sun or other agency, and under such conditions that if from any cause they are exploded, it will not cause the building to get afire. This can be done by putting such fire works in a non-inflammable container complet- ily enclosed above, below and on all sides, except the front in the display window, except when good are not exposed to the direct sun rays.

2. No fire works shall be displayed or sold on the streets, sidewalks, al- leys, yards or vacant lots or other such places in any city or town of the state.

3. All dealers must keep all fire works stored in non-inflammable con- tainers, if the original shipping cas- es have been unpacked before June 20th.

4. No fire works that are capable of causing serious injury to the per- son by explosion shall be sold. This specifically bans the four explosive fire works items known as "Radio Salute," "K O Flash Salute," "O K Flash Salute" and "Victory Flash Salute."

5. No fire works shall be sold to children under the age of twelve years.

6. No fire works shall be sold or ex- ploded at any public filling station or bulk station of Class 1 and 2 Inflam- mable Liquids.

7. Sales by retail merchants may begin on June 20th but no deliveries shall be made of fire works until July 1st. Sales and deliveries shall terminate July 5th.

8. This department reserves the right to stop the use, sale or display of fire works by any person doing the same in a careless, or negligent manner, or violating any or all of these rules.

KELVINATOR'S

4-way cold means—

Two Degrees of Cold for Foods—One for milk, meats, fruits, vegetables and other perishables; another for frozen meats and fish, game, frozen fruits. . . . More Ice—100% Faster Freezing of Ice and Frozen Desserts, such as sherbets, mousses and parfaits. . . . Less Work—Being entirely automatic, there is nothing to control by hand, and therefore no tax on the memory. . . . No Food Spoilage—The 4 different cold temperatures do their work in 4 different compartments, entirely separate from each other. Thus the main food compartment is always between 40 and 50 degrees—and never at food freezing temperature.

KELVINATOR'S AUTOMATIC 4-WAY COLD GIVES YOU

1 More Ice Automatically—De Luxe models provide more ice, size for size, than any other refrigerator. From 20 to 34 lbs. at a freezing.

2 Automatic Super-Fast Freezing—In a second compartment, a very low cold for extra-quick ice. Iso-Thermic Tubes—exclusive Kelvinator feature—give extraordinary freezing speed.

3 Automatic Cold Storage—In de luxe models a third compartment, with below-freezing cold for cold storage of meats, game, fish, ice cream, etc.

2 New Features . . .

4 New Rubber Ice Trays—Made of flexible, pure rubber. Bends easily in the hands, releasing one or a dozen ice cubes. These trays increase the usable yield of ice from 33 to 50 per cent because they prevent waste by melting under faucet. Inside Electric Light—On de luxe models, an electric light illuminates the cabinet. Switch and light indicator on front of box. A convenience that will be appreciated by every housewife.

Scientific Refrigeration—In food compartments, a 40 to 50-degree constant cold—automatically maintained—just the right temperature, science says, to keep foods fresh.

Everyone can now own a Kelvinator—on Easy Terms—

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD

FIVE ARE GIVEN L. L. D. DEGREE AT DEPAUW COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

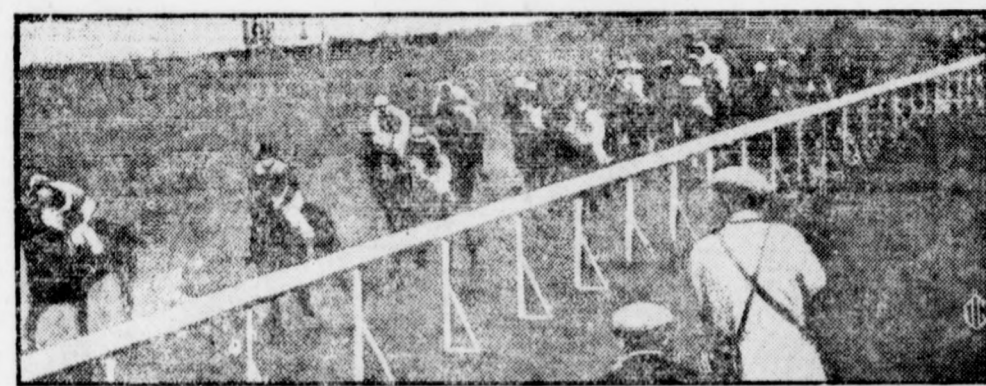

Three United States Judges, one college president and one of the most distinguished attorneys in the country, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at DePauw university commencement exercises here today.

All three United States Judges are DePauw graduates. They are Judge James H. Wilkerson, U. S. District court, Chicago, class of 1889; Judge Halsted L. Ritter, U. S. District court, Miami, Fla., class of 1891, and Judge Will M. Sparks, U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, Chicago, class of 1896. Judge Sparks was circuit court judge at Rushville, Ind., before his recent appointment to the post of Judge Anderson, resigned.

The college president so honored is Louis B. Hopkins, president of Wabash college at Crawfordsville, Ind., a brother of Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth college. The attorney is the Hon. Salmon O. Levinson, Chicago, chairman of the American Commission for Outlawing War and an eminent writer on that subject.

CLUB RECEIVES LARGE SHIPMENT OF YOUNG BASS

PUTNAM COUNTY PORTING CLUB PLANTS YOUNG BASS IN COUNTY STREAMS—PHEASANT EGGS DISTRIBUTED

The Putnam County Spotting club received a shipment of several thousand small mouth black bass yesterday from the government fish hatchery Louisville, Ky. The young bass were planted in several branch streams, it being hoped that better results will be obtained than planting in the large streams which are to some extent infested with gar pike. The young fish will thus have a better chance to grow to considerable size before reaching the larger streams. It is hoped that sportsmen will be careful in seining for minnows and crawfish in these branches not to remove or injure any young bass.

The club also received and distributed 150 ring neck pheasant eggs this week from the state conservation department. These eggs will be hatched by a number of farmers who have kindly agreed to co-operate in raising and releasing young pheasants. It is unlawful to kill pheasants at any time. The birds raised last year are reported doing nicely and considerable interest is manifest in these very attractive birds.

"Golden Calf" Peppy Musical Show With Big Cast of Favorites

Capacity audiences are enjoying "The Golden Calf," Fox Movietone comedy, which is the current production at the Voncastle Theatre, which plays again tonight and Tuesday.

Hailed as one of the best comedies of the year, "The Golden Calf" also has half a dozen unusually tuneful song numbers and spectacularly staged ensembles which add materially to its entertainment value.

Sue Carol is seen and heard first as a prim, prudish secretary to the gay Jack Mulhall, Greenwich Village advertising artist. To win his love, when he fails to pay the slightest attention to her, she transforms herself into a dashing beauty and becomes Mulhall's model destined to make him famous.

El Brendel, famous comedian, is a Swedish cartoonist in the production and also contributes a novelty song number that is guaranteed to cure even a bluebird of the blues. Marjorie White, Richard Keene and Paul Page are also featured.

Added to the bill tonight and Tuesday will be an all-talk Monty Collins comedy and the Paramount sound news.

The program is highly guaranteed by the management.
